Amy Porter

Medium Biography

Flutist Amy Porter is known worldwide for her rich tone, expressive depth and commanding technique, and she is in demand as a soloist, chamber musician, author and innovator. She has also become one of the most creative muses for today's composers, and new works keep being written for her. On April 13, 2027, she gives the premiere of John Mackey's Flute Concerto with the University of Michigan Symphony Band.

As a soloist she has appeared with the Buffalo Philharmonic, including an October 2022 performance at Carnegie Hall for Lukas Foss's centennial. She has also played with the Toledo Symphony and the Evergreen Philharmonic, and she is closely associated with Michael Daugherty's flute concerto Trail of Tears, which she has performed many times. She has been heard in recital on NPR and on PBS's Live From Lincoln Center. She won both the Kobe International Flute Competition and the Paris/Ville d'Avray International Flute Competition, and she has since served on international juries, including at Kobe.

The New York Times praised her "gleaming, lyrical reading" of Bach's Cello Suites on In Translation (Equilibrium). Her recordings range from Telemann's fantasias to new American works by David Sampson and Nina Shekhar. She is a founding member of Trio Virado, with violist Jaime Amador and guitarist João Luiz, which has performed across the United States. American Record Guide called the trio's playing "unfailingly strong, expressive, and imaginative," and its new album, Trialogue on Centaur Records (released January 1, 2027), features music by Assad, Milhaud, Ravel, Piazzolla, Luiz and Sampson. She is a former member of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and is Principal Flute of the Brevard Music Center.
